HISTORICAL GENESIS

The Lohit district derives its name from the river Lohit. The Lohit River originates from the eastern Tibet and flow through Anjaw district and river is known by the name Telu and enters Lohit district and flows by the name Lohit till it meets Dibang river and finally flows into river Brahmaputra.

Prior to 1914 Lohit district was part of the Lakhimpur district. However with the Government of India, Foreign and Political department, notification of 1914, Lohit district was separated from Lakhimpur district and became part of the Central and Eastern Section of the tract under the charge of Political Officer at Sadiya as its headquarter and the tract were collectively known as North-East Frontier Tract. In 1919 the Central and Eastern section was renamed as the Sadiya Frontier Tract. In 1943 certain areas from Sadiya Frontier Tract and Lakhimpur Frontier was renamed as Tirap Frontier Tract and again in 1948 remaining portion of Sadiya Frontier Tract was bifurcated into Mishmi Hills District and Abhor Hills District. In 1950 plain portion of Mishmi Hills district was transferred to Assam State Government and in 1951 Mishmi Hills District along with other Hills District and Frontier Tracts was renamed as North-East Frontier Agency (NEFA). In 1952 headquarter of Mishmi Hills Division was shifted from Sadiya to Tezu. According to Regulation of 1954, administrative areas and boundaries of Lohit Hills District were renamed as Lohit Frontier Division. In 1956, Dibang Valley was constituted as separate administrative unit within the Division under the charge of Additional Political Officer at Roing as headquarter and later shifted to Anini. According to North-East Frontier Agency (Administration) Regulation of 1965, the Lohit Frontier Division was renamed with present name as Lohit District in the year 1965 and the administrators like Political Officer, Additional Political Officer and Assistant Political Officer were re-designated as Deputy Commissioner, Additional Deputy Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner respectively. In 1st June 1980 Dibang Valley district was separated from Lohit district and became as independent district. Again in 16th February 2004 Anjaw district was bifurcated from Lohit district under the Arunachal Pradesh Re-Organisation of District Amendment Bills (2) and again further on 25th November 2014 Namsai district was carved out from the erstwhile Lohit district and became 18th district of Arunachal Pradesh.

PEOPLE, CULTURE AND FESTIVAL

Lohit district is inhabitant by the three tribes namely Mishmi (Taraon, Kaman and Idu), Adi and Tai-Khampti. The district is largely dominated by the Taraon Mishmi and Kaman Mishmi tribes.

Taraon-Mishmi and Kaman-Mishmi

Taraon Mishmi is also known as 'Digaru' and Kaman Mishmi known as 'Mju', they share a common dress and culture, festival and ritual ceremony, however they speak different dialects. Taraon Mishmi and Kaman Mishmi can easily be distinguished from other tribes; Mishmi (Taraon and Kaman) men wear traditional Black turban also locally known as Phorongang and colourful and beautifully designed traditional coat and women wear delicately designed Mekhela, traditional coat, beads and ornaments and the silver band on the head. Mishmi (Taraon and Kaman) are popularly known for their aesthetic handloom design, traditional sword making and basket making.

Taraon Mishmi and Kaman Mishmi speak Sino-Tibetan language and they believe in animism and worship RingyaJawmalu and AmikMtai respectively.

Tamla Du is the major festival of both Taraon Mishmi and Kaman Mishmi. Tamla Du pooja was earlier performed by individual or by villagers to protect the family or village from evil spirit and natural calamities. However, in early 1970s Tamla Du was commonly celebrated for first time to signify the sense of brotherhood and unity among the community, and then and now Tamla Du is celebrated on 15th of February every year. Ritual during the Tamla Du festival is firstly performed by the priest by offering prayer to god Bruyan-Diyoyan (Brahma-Shiva) in Taraon Mishmi and Buru-Sutok (Brahma-Shiva) in Kaman Mishmi and prayer is again further offered to RingyaJawmalu and AmikMtaifor blessing the nature as saviour of human life and celebrated with happiness and gaiety.

Idu-Mishmi

Idu-Mishmi tribe is another important tribe of Lohit district. They are also of mongoloid race like Digaru Mishmi and Miju Mishmi and have distinctive dialect of Sino-Tibetan language. Idu-Mishmi tribe can be distinctively identified among other tribal groups of Arunachal Pradesh by their typical hairstyle, distinctive costumes and artistic pattern embedded on their clothes. This tribe still maintain deep rooted aesthetic values in their day to day life with great pride and honour.

Traditionally, Idu-Mishmi believes in animism. They worshipped Maselo-Zinu and Nani Intaya as creators of mankind and universe as a whole. Idu priest locally known as Igu holds a place of pride in the society. Mythological characters like Sineru a first Idu Priest still holds high place and reverence in the minds of the people. The prints of his palm on the huge rock at Athu-Popu near Keyala pass in Dibang Valley district in China border, is supreme and holy shrine.

Idu-Mishmi, Men and Women are highly artistic and have the aesthetic sense. Men folk in the Idu-Mishmi society are well momentous in making beautiful basketry items of bamboo and cane and Women in particular are very good weavers. Their great aesthetic sense is well reflected in the delicate design created on the clothes produced on handlooms.

Reh and Ke-meh-ha are two important festivals of Idu-Mishmi Community. Reh is celebrated on 1st and 2nd February every year. Celebration of Reh starts with the chanting and dancing by Priest in which god and goddess Maselo-Zinu and Nani Intaya are prayed and given thanks for their blessings of everything given to the mankind.

Earlier Reh was performed only by individuals in order to know his relatives, prosperity, peace and well being of the family. But in late 1960s under the leadership of late Ita Pulu, whole Idu-Mishmi community was mobilised to celebrate Reh under one umbrella to bring the sense of brotherhood, oneness and peace among the society. Since then whole community celebrate reh commonly with traditional fervor and gaiety.

Ke-me-ha is another important festival of Idu-Mishmi Community. Ke-Me Ha means ingestion of new harvested rice. This ritual also used to be performed at individual level to appease the goddess Manu (Goddess of Prosperity). It is celebrated on 24th September every year. This festival is celebrated after the harvesting of rice and celebrated with traditional pomp and gaiety.

Adi

Adi is also one of the Important indigenous tribes of Arunachal Pradesh and sparsely settled in the parts of Lohit district. Adi people also speak Sino-Tibetan language and believe themselves to be the decedents of Abo-Tani.

Adi people are culturally rich and believe in animism and worship Donyi-Polo (Sun-Moon) like other tribes of Tani clan. Like Mishmi tribe, men folk of Adi tribe are also popularly known for traditional basket making and women are known for weaving and handloom design. Kebang system referred as traditional court of Adi tribe is very popular among the tribes of Arunachal Pradesh.

The festivals like Donggin, Unying-Aran, Solung and Podi-Barbi are the important festivals of Adi tribe and among all these festivals Solung festival is popularly known in the State. Solung is the agricultural festival of Adi tribes. It is celebrated in the 1st of September every year and celebration of festival is lasted for a week. During the festival prayer is offered to the goddess Kine Nane for prosperity and a good harvest and also for protection against harms by evil spirits. The main highlight of festival which attracts people and tourist is the popular Ponung dance performed by ladies of all age groups.

Tai-Khampti

Tai-Khampti is also one of the major tribe of Arunachal Pradesh. The word Khampti means "a land full of gold" where Kham means Gold and Ti means Place. Majority of the Tai-Khampti tribe resides in the Namsai district.

Tai-Khampti has a distinct, rich and unparalleled cultural heritage. Tai Khampti people are very strong believers of Theravada (Hinayana) Buddhism. There is prayer room in every house of Tai-Khampti people and the families pray every morning and evening with offerings of flower (nam taw yongli) and food (khao tang som). They are peace loving people.

Tai-Khampti is the only tribe in the State to be known to have its own script called as Tai Script (Uk-Tai). The Tribe has preference for conventional attires, enriched by brilliant craft work, their beautifully crafted sword known as Phanap is very popular in the State. The Khampti crafts in bamboo, wood, bone and ivory are also spectacular.

Tai-Khampti celebrates various festivals but Sangken known as the water festival is the main and important festival of Khamptis. It is celebrated on 14th of April every year. 'Poi Pee Mou' is also one of the important New Year festivals of Tai-Khampti tribe. The festival is the symbol of unity and celebrates to disseminate the rich cultural heritage and exotic cuisine of Tai-Khampti to the world.

PLACE OF TOURIST INTEREST

Lohit district is one of the oldest districts of Arunachal Pradesh and has potential for perfect tourist destination. Lohit district can be seen as hub for tourist destination as it provides opportunity for tourism activities like hiking, trekking, river rafting, aesthetic view of scenery, pilgrimage, etc. Some of the prominent tourist places in the district where tourist can enjoy as perfect hill station for holiday are:
